WILD BILL, OF KANSAS

Killing Two Soldiers in a Twinkling, but Hesitating at a Monkey. "Wild Bill was a good shot, was he

"With the six shooter he was simply wonderful. In my entertainment I give an illustration of a double shot he made out at Hays City, Kan, in the early days, when he shot two soldiers, one in out of him and one directly behind him, can condenvering to shoot him before he could draw his gun. He killed one and mor-tally wounded the other, and the two re-ports of the revolver seemed almost as one. The marvelous feat was the talk of one. The marvelous feat was the talk of the country for a long time. In fact, when I came by there a few days ago one of the old residents who witnessed the killing mentioned it to me and said be could scarcely believe it even after seeing it. Bill never missed his mark. I have seen him take a pistol in each hand and seen him take a pistol in each hand and fire with right and left pistol at a can thrown in the air, hitting it with both bullets. By the way, I heard a very funny story told on Bill some time ago. If you remember, he married Mrs. Agnes Lake, widow of Lake, the circus man. Bill fairly worshiped his wife, but despite his great love for her she never could induce him to quit drinking. He would come home full of bad whisky, and one day lirs. Hickok said to him:

"Eill, if you don't quit this drinking pretty con you will actually begin to see mkeya.' "Monteys" said he. 'What do you mean, little one! " 'Why, you know, when people back east drink too much of the kind of whisky they get back there they see snakes, but this awful stuff out here makes them see

'Din laughed at her and did not give "Hit laughed at her and did not give the matter a second thought, little dreaming that she had 'put up a job' to break him of his intemperate habits. There was a tame menkey in the town—Cheyenne, I believe it was—and Mrs. Hickok had induced its owner to loan it to her for a night. Bill came home that night comfortable drunk, and after he had gone to aleep his wife secured the menkey and chained it to the foot of the bed. Then turning down the light a little she to turning down the light a little, she too retired and awaited results. Dill woke up in the night burning with thirst and raised up into a sitting posture, intending to get out of bed and get a drink of water. There, perched up on the footboard, was the monkey, staring him in the face with the monkey, staring him in the lace with hideous grimaces. He rubbed his bleared eyes, looked again, and a horrible suspi-cion came into his befuddled brain. Had his wife told him the truth? Did he really have 'em? Finally, he sprang out on the floor, seized his six shooter, which lay on a table near, leveled it at the grinning creature, and said:

"'Now, old man, if you are a monkey you're in a bad fix; if you ain't a monkey I'm in a bad fix.' At the same instant he fired and the monkey fell over in the agonies of death. His wife, who had been watching the working of her scheme, sprang up in the bed with a scream, and Bill, turning to her with a broad smile of the most intense satisfaction, said:

"Little woman, congratulate me, for I have just had a wonderful escape, I ain't as drunk as I thought I was, and there's a monkey lyin' there on the floor that'll never intrude itself into the domestic felicy of another happy family an' make a gentleman think he's get the jim-jams.' The Sunskine in Mexico.

In two years' time the mercury in my house has never risen above 65 degrees house has never risen above 65 degrees nor fallen below 50. It is a curious physiological fact that, after a time, an American living here becomes unable to stand intense heat, such, for example, as one may experience by walking under the vertical tropical sun at midday. On first coming here Americans and Englishmer walk with impunity in the sun, but in a year or more the same men begin to seek the shady side of the street on summer days. The explanation of the coolness of stores, offices and houses even during what we here call the "hot months" of April we here call the "hot months" of April and May, is the rarity of the air, which,
in shaded places, cannot hold much heat.
One never feels the necessity of stripping off one's cuter clothing to keep cool. In a word, the tableland climate of Mexico, while not perfect, is, compared with the New England collection of violently assorted weathers, ideal. I have seen a thin, cadaverous, Boston consumptive, nearly killed there at the blowing of the east wind, gain twenty pounds in six months wind, gain twenty pounds in six months in this city, and those nervous diseases engendered by the erratic thermometer of New England are much helped by resi-dence here. The drinking of the common people's beverage of pulque stops the ance of vegetables the year round conduces to the cure of dyspepsia, as does also the tranquillity of Life in a country where no one is in a hurry .- City of Mexico Cor. The Parisian Bal Roses.

The fashion of giving bals blanes, which are attended by girls of tender age only, who are not yet entitled to make their debut in secrety, or to appear at the bala roses, is meeting at present with some opposition. These infantine balls, which are, however, frequently attended by young ladies of 20 years, have been not insppropriately compared to regiments composed of old veterans and cufans de troupe. The chief sufferers from such conventional entertainments are, of course, the older neophytes, who are con-demned to go through their weltzes and quadrilles under the eyes of atrabilious duennas. It is doubtful, however, if the present opposition will be able to break through the barriers of formalism which hedge in the marringeable French girl as if she were a pulling infant, and condemn her to a Cinderella like treatment unheard of in the social philosophy of her English or American sisters.—Paris Co:. Told to a Friend

Of course in all families the mother is the one to whom the children cling. We don't talk to them, feel with them, love them, occupy ourselves about them as the female does. We think about our business and pleasure, not theirs. Why do I trouble you with these perplexities? If I mayn't tell you what I feel, what is the use of a friend? That's why I would rather have a sad letter from you, or a short one if you are tired or unwell, than a them gay one-and I don't subscribe at all to the doctrine of "striving to be cheerful."-"Unpublished Letters of Thuck-eray" in Scribner's.

Revolutionizing the Business. A young man in Missouri started out to be a snake charmer and revolutionize the business, but the first thing he felt was the fangs of a rattlesnake buried in his check, and it has taken two months to get the swelling of his check reduced so that he can wear a No. 8 hat.—Detroit

TURKISH BATHS AND BEAUTY.

The Art of Dancing All Night and Geing Home Fresh in the Horning. Ladics in New York are getting more and more into the way of resorting to the Turkish bath as a means of restoring color to the cheeks and brightness to the eyes etter a night of dissipation. I know a girl whose complexion is of the clearest, but who has left the ballroom many a time as early as 3 o'clock, so fearful is she of injuring her greatest charm. She heard of the Turkish bath, and therefore risked dancing until 5 and after the other morning. From the ballroom she went directly to the bathing establishment, feeling as if the entire world saw her inflamed eyes and sunken cheeks. From the office she was conducted to a box of a room about as large as a section in a sleeping car. When my friend had re-moved her garments she was led into an iron walled room, where the air was so bot that the perspiration started at once from every pore. She was told to sit down-there were several chairs for the purpose-and to wait until called for. The heat was surprisingly great, but after a moment it produced that languid feeling that is perfectly delicious to a tired body. The attendant returned shortly and bound a wet towel about the new er's head. It began to steam almost immediately. Five minutes of this and it became uncomfortable, ten a torture, fifteen frightful and the last five of the twenty minutes were simply im-measurable suffering. Then a strong, motherly looking woman came in. She had on a loose gown that had no sleeves and fell only to the knees. "How long must I stay here?" exclaimed the suffering customer.

The attendant ran her hand along the dear girl's back and limbs, and said: "You seem to have sweated pretty well; I guess you can come clong now."

They went into a room adjoining. It was nearly as hot as the first. There was a table in it on which the parboiled girl was requested to lie down. Then the stal-wart attendant went at her in a hammer and tongs style. She rubbed and scrubbed and lathered her for several minutes, and scraped her with a brush, and k-ended her flesh until it seemed as if her very bones must have felt the cleansing effect of the operation. The attendant was puffing and blowing from the exertion when she told the customer to sit up, and went to a hose that lay innecently coiled up at one end of the room. Without more than a "sit still now, please," she began to play a cooling stream of water on the lathered and glowing girl. The word cooling is used advisedly, for as it played it rapidly grew chilly, and presently the dear girl was spluttering a helpless plea for a change. The contrast with the intense heat she had endured was tremendant. The attendant dropped the hose she thought best, but before the poor innocent customer could rejoice at the relief she was being pounded with the icy cold blows of a shower bath. It was agony itself, and it scemed as if every inch of her glistening cuticle were being overlaid with pricking icicles. But this, too. had its end, and the novice was all but crying with weariness and torture when the attendant led her into another room and began to dry her. When the water had been entirely removed from her body, she was wrapped in a blanket and taken

"How long will you sleep?" asked the

"Why, I don't want to sleep at all," re plied the customer. "I want to go home."

But she was told she would have to lice But she was told she would have to lic there a while any way, and that she would surely fall asleep, so she would better say when she wanted to get up. She named her hour and was tucked up in her bunk, She was still perspiring, and in two minutes was sound asleep. She was awakened promptly, and her eyes feeling heavy and her body weary, was told to get into a tank of water sunk in the floor of still another room, into which she had of still another room, into which she had been led. The water was chilly and she was glad to get out of it hastily. It was the last torture. She was rubbed with alcohol to prevent her from taking cold and then permitted to dress. When the dear girl got home it was just her time for breakfast. She slipped into the house unobserved and promptly appeared in the dining room, feeling as bright and vigor-ous as if she had had a full night's sleep, and betraying not the alightest sign of her dissipation.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Boulanger as an Organizer.

"For fourteen years," said the diplomatist, "Eoulanger had, as a subordinate officer, chafed and fretted that he could not carry out plans of reorganization of the French army that had been his con stant study since the iron entered his soul at the battle of Sedan, in witnessing the overthrow of the French forces. This overthrow, he felt, was due to the short comings of the French, soldier and the want of the French, soldier and the want of thorough organization of the French army. As minister of war he could give those plans a trial, and the speed with which they were put in operation showed how long and carefully he had studied out the octails of his scheme. is a wonderful organizer, and I am cure his only embition lies in the desire to redcem the military reputation of the French people by restoring the prestige of their soldiers."—New York Graphic.
